NO EMPIRE LASTS FOREVER

ESPECIALLY ONE THAT KEEPS
YOU WAITING 5 HOURS FOR A REPAIRMAN.

When you have no competition, you can afford to be unresponsive to your customers. When you are the competition, you have to be more than responsive.

So who are we?

We're Starpower and we're building the first fiber-optic network to supply combined phone and cable service to residents in your area, along with high-speed Internet service through our subsidiary, Eto's.

In the spirit of competition, we'll switch you over from your current provider for free. We'll give you better rates than either Bell Atlantic or your local cable company. And if you're not satisfied with our service, we'll switch you back again at no cost. (We'd hardly be champions of choice if we did otherwise.)

If you'd like to know more, stop by 1130 Connecticut Ave., Washington, D.C. Or call the toll-free number below.

Unless, of course, you enjoy spending the occasional day waiting for the doorbell to ring.

ESTER, N.H. — Cabletron Inc., the number four networking company, may spin off parts of some business to increase the value of the company, president and CEO Craig Benson said. Cabletron rose 2 1/16, or 23 cents, to 11 1/2 in trading of 8.05 million shares, more than five times the month daily average. It was its biggest one-day surge in five years. The maker of gear used to link computers to the Internet has "considered the possibility of taking the company private and offering them to the public," Benson said. Cabletron might sell part of its network management software business or its computer services unit, but its shares had plunged 12 months after its fiscal year ended in February 1996, because the company was late to market with new products. Selling a minority value," Benson said.

Still, Cabletron has to prove it can win business from number one network-equipment maker Cisco Systems Inc. and other larger rivals if it's to jump-start revenue growth, said Craig Johnson, an analyst with market researcher Pita Group in Portland, Ore.

"Selling part of the business doesn't address their fundamental problems," Johnson said.

Cabletron's revenue for the 1995 fiscal year that ended in February rose 2.5 percent to $1.41 billion from $1.38 billion a year earlier.

Any sale of Cabletron's Spectrum software business, which contributes about 5 percent of revenue, or its services business, which contributes about 12 percent, wouldn't happen until later this year, Benson said.

Benson said Cabletron would maintain a controlling ownership stake in either business.

Atlantic seen securing trust clearance to buy GTE

BLOOMBERG NEWS

INGTON — Bell Atlantic receive expected US antitrust clearance to buy GTE Corp. in an important hurdle to become the largest US company, said people familiar with the proposed deal. The companies have agreed to merge overlapping wireline operations in Tampa, Richmond, said the people familiar with the discussions between the company and US Justice Department's approval by antitrust specialists. Analysts say companies still anticipate a review by the Federal Communications Commission, where William Kennard said regulators will study the implications of GTE's long-distance phone and Internet service. The 1996 telecommunications law prohibits New York-based Bell Atlantic and other regional telephone companies formed by the 1981 breakup of AT&T Corp. from offering long-distance service in their operating areas until they open their local markets to competition.

GTE, the number three local phone company, has offered to shed the 100,000 long-distance customers it has in Bell Atlantic's region. Irving, Texas-based GTE, a major carrier of Internet traffic, uses long-distance lines to provide the service.

Regulators in Virginia and Kentucky have withheld their approval of the combination, ordering the companies to show how the transaction would help consumers.
